The aim of this course is to give students a fundamental and practical understanding of leadership. The course is designed for people from a variety of backgrounds and cultures. The purpose is to increase significantly one's capacity to sustain the demands of leadership and to strengthen considerably one's ability to exercise both leadership and authority.

Drawing from several disciplines, the course develops a framework for diagnosing and intervening in political and organizational systems to generate adaptive work. Philosophy and biology provide a basis for understanding the concepts of paradigm, change, and adaptation. Political science and business management offer perspectives for examining the functions of authority and for distinguishing these from the exercise of leadership. Social psychology gives insight into the dynamics of social systems and an approach to diagnosing their productivity and dysfunctions. Music provides a language for working with qualities such as harmony, inspiration, timing, conducting, creativity, listening, and resolution.

In addition to the weekly lecture/discussion, consultation group, and debriefing sessions, the course has several evening sessions that use films and musical exercises to illustrate key skills and concepts. The dates for these sessions are listed on the syllabus.

Design:

The course is designed to enable students to learn by a variety of means: lectures, case analyses, readings, films, structured exercises, and experience. To learn from the richness of people's experiences, each student presents a personal case study of leadership to his or her small consultation group that meets throughout the term. In addition, students analyze the dynamics common to many social systems facing adaptive work by analyzing the dynamics of the class itself as a case-in-point.

Consultation Group Sessions:

The full class is divided randomly into small groups of 7-9 students. The small groups meet for 1½ hours a week at a time to be arranged (there are several options from which to choose). The purpose of these sessions is to give students a laboratory:

1. to apply what they learn in class and in the readings to their professional experiences;

2. to investigate ways to exercise leadership with and without authority;

3. to discover and analyze the dynamics of how groups accomplish and avoid adaptive work.

The organization of these groups is described in detail in class. Briefly, on a rotating basis, each student prepares a case study from his or her professional experience and presents it to the group for consultation. A guide to preparing the case study is distributed in class. In addition, each student serves as the chairperson for the group on a rotating basis.

During the debriefing sessions on Thursday afternoons, the whole class participates in analyzing a student case in depth.

Requirements:

1. Complete and on-time attendance.
2. A weekly written analysis of the consultation group sessions (2-3 pages).
3. Presentation of a case study to the small group.
4. Several short written assignments (1-3 pages).
5. A major paper, which can be based on the case study, analyzing aspects of leadership (20 pages).
6. No exams.

Grading:

- Classroom work 30%
  This is based upon both an individual's effort and the quality of one's leadership in the class, and not the quantity or volume of comments. The key questions are: How much and how well did each student mobilize learning for fellow students in the class?

- Weekly papers 30%

- Major paper 40%

All readings are on reserve in the Kennedy School library. Reading packets can be purchased at the Kennedy School Case Distribution Office, Belfer G-6. Readings that are not included in the packets can be found in the KSG Library. These readings are identified by an asterisk (*) on the syllabus.
